Lumpkin named director of TDCJ Manufacturing and Logistics

In August, Bobby Lumpkin was named director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice (TDCJ) Manufacturing and Logistics Division.

Lumpkin, a 23-year veteran of TDCJ, began his career with the agency in 1990 as a correctional officer at the Diagnostic Unit. He promoted through the security ranks and held the position of assistant warden on several Correctional Institutions Division units. He also worked in the Administrative Review and Risk Management Division as the American Correctional Association accreditation manager, and the review and standards manager. Most recently, Lumpkin served as deputy director of the Private Facility Contract Monitoring Oversight Division.

Congratulating him on his promotion, TDCJ Executive Director Brad Livingston highlighted Lumpkin's long career with the agency, saying, "His experience includes ongoing unit-based responsibilities as well as key management and leadership roles in two additional divisions within the agency. This extensive and diverse background will serve TDCJ well as he assumes his new responsibilities." ●
